

GOVERNMENT EXPERT SHOWS WOMEN AND GIRLS HOW TO CAN AND PRESERVE, BEGINS WORK HERE; GOVERNMENT WANTS ALL WOMEN INTERESTED

By JULIA A. SHARP.

The first demonstration of the canning and preserving class under Miss Lou Stallman, of Houston, Friday morning was a wonderful success. Miss Stallman is sent here by the agricultural department of the federal government and found a cozy place, 1214, all fitted up, sanitarily, awaiting her. The tables are covered with white oil cloth, the counters and shelves are all painted white and the place is screened in and everything is in the very best condition for the work and Miss Stallman appreciated the efforts that had been made. Women from all walks of life were present—club women, musicians, artists, housewives, clerks and, in fact, from all vocations were there in one common interest.

Plans were put up Friday morning, the "cold pack" and "hot bath" being demonstrated. Miss Stallman gave an instructive talk on putting up fruits and juices without sugar, showing they can be perfectly preserved in this manner. She also demonstrated how grapefruit can be preserved without sugar, or if sugar is desired, only one cup being used to one gallon of juice. She showed how corn syrup can be used instead of sugar to preserve and can fruits.

The government has instructed Miss Stallman to give a series of "intensive instructions" to a class of at least 25 women, who will have to pledge themselves to be faithful in the lessons and, when over, to take the examination and, if they pass, they will be appointed as instructors and will have to devote one day each week to instructing women in preserving and canning.

The idea is to have expert instructors in each neighborhood in the city and up and down the valley to preserve the food, the government wanting every housewife in the United States to have at least 90 quarts of fruit on her shelves.

This will be the same intensive training that Red Cross workers have received in order to instruct and the public will be privileged to attend while the classes are being instructed for the housewives of El Paso and vicinity to take advantage of the training of one of the best experts in the country," said Mrs. J. A. Rawlings today. "This afternoon Miss Stallman will demonstrate the canning in glass and tin of string beans."

"All women are not only welcome, but are urged to be present at such and every one of the demonstrations during the next two weeks."

The location is still 12 and 13, in the city market.

Miss Stallman is here in the interest of the food administration. She is connected with the extension department of the University of Texas.

Wade Hampton Chapter, U. D. C., Has Meeting And Discusses Work For Year

Wade Hampton chapter, U. D. C., will meet today with Mrs. J. H. Harper, 3201 Bluebell street. After the regular business session, Red Cross knitting will occupy the members for the rest of the afternoon. Plans will be made for the fall work of the chapter and the historian, Mrs. J. H. Harper, will give a report on the work of the year.

The members of the U. D. C. spent the day Thursday at the home of Mrs. J. H. Harper on Bluebell street sewing and knitting for the Red Cross. A midday lunch was served. Those working were: Mrs. R. C. Christian, Mrs. C. J. Langford, Mrs. J. W. Martin, Mrs. P. R. Jackson, Mrs. T. M. Lurie, Mrs. J. W. Vance, Mrs. A. J. Phillips, Mrs. F. A. Allen, Mrs. A. J. Oliver, Mrs. W. W. Schwartz and Mrs. J. W. Goss.

There will be no meeting of the Nine Fifty Knitters today, as most of the members are out of town at present.

Ysleta Celebrates Feast Of Carmen; El Paso Boy Scouts Gather Pears

Ysleta, Tex., July 12.—The feast of the old mission of Ysleta, was beautifully celebrated this year, though not so elaborately as in former years, on account of the war. The celebration began on the eve of the feast with a service containing exquisite musical numbers. Hundreds of candles outlined the artistic lines of the old building. Bishop Schuler, of the diocese, presided at the altar, and the church, conducted the masses. Great quantities of roses decorated the altar and the church.

A number of people from El Paso and the surrounding valley were entertained in the homes here during the church celebration. Seventy-five Boy Scouts, under the leadership of their scoutmaster, Mr. J. H. Harper, gathered in the fruit grove, one of the largest ever known in this valley. The boys gathered in the grove and the scoutmaster, Mr. J. H. Harper, presided at the altar. The boys gathered in the grove and the scoutmaster, Mr. J. H. Harper, presided at the altar.

The Y. M. C. A. workers from El Paso came down Thursday evening and conducted an interesting program for the soldiers stationed here. Mr. and Mrs. Morris Lowenstein have arrived safely overseas and are very happy and pleased with the arrangements. Mrs. J. H. Harper has received a card announcing the safe arrival of Miguel Ornelas, a Ysleta boy, overseas. Invitations are out for a dance to be given Saturday evening at the West Ysleta Country club by a club composed of boys and called "The Silk Shirts."

Congressional Campaign Viewed By A Newly Enfranchised Voter

By S. R. L. J.

If I were not so deeply interested, I should certainly be amused at the enthusiasm with which the El Paso women are following this political campaign.

Hudspeth has just left my house. Such a pleasant woman! I did not see her engaged in such work. I wonder how much is being paid these fair canvassers? They must have lots of money to spend at the Hudspeth headquarters. Now I am confined at home and cannot get out and canvass for the man who upholds the principles I have always stood for—even for love or money. These principles are alive and kicking, especially this year and next year, and we want Hudspeth's ideas in the wool in our public office, especially, I say, during the present crisis.

WITH NATIONAL PROHIBITION HANGING OVER US, AND WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE NOT DECIDED, WE DON'T WANT A MAN WHOSE POLICY IS TO KEEP US OUT OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES. WE WANT A WOMAN WHO WILL STAND FOR THE PRINCIPLES OF PROHIBITION AND WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

Plant Chickens Winter Green Feed

(Special Information Service U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

A Small Patch of Kale Adjacent to the Poultry Yard Will Go a Long Way Toward Keeping the Fowls in Condition Through the Winter.

Practically Every Poultry Grower Can Save Money by Summer Planting of Some Crop That Will Supply Green Feed for the Poultry Throughout the Winter; Some Suggested Crops.

THE time has arrived when poultry keepers should begin making provision for a supply of winter green feeds. While such feeds contain only a comparatively small percentage of actual food nutrients, they are important because of their succulence and bulk, which lighten the grain ration and assist in keeping the birds in good condition. By taking thought far enough ahead, many back yard poultry keepers even can produce most of the green feed needed and thus avoid a considerable expense.

If you have enough ground, the double yard system is advisable for supplying green feed during the growing season. By this system, the birds are confined to one of the yards while the other is planted to some quick growing green feed into which the hens are turned when it attains a height of three or four inches. This system not only furnishes green feed for the birds but freshens and purifies the yard. Among the best crops for this purpose are rape, rye, oats and barley. Rye is regarded as particularly good because, in most sections, it will live through the winter and furnish an excellent early spring pasture. There are various other crops adapted to different sections. The proper season for planting varies according to the locality.

Of stored feeds, cabbage, mangel warts, clover and alfalfa make the best winter feed for poultry.

Green Feed For the Hens Necessary. Hens must have green feed all winter if they are to pay for their keep in eggs.

A little forethought and effort will enable most poultry keepers, even in the coldest winter, to furnish their flocks with green feed without much expense. Grow some green feed at home. Now is the time to plant. It will save a good bit of money next winter.

Winter. Cabbage and mangels may be either grown at home or bought in the fall, when prices are low, and stored in the cellar. Cabbages do not keep as well in ordinary cellars as mangels, and where both of these feeds are available, the mangels should be fed first. The best method of feeding is to suspend the cabbages in coarsely woven mesh. Mangels should be split and stuck on nails on the wall or fence.

Clover and alfalfa may be fed as hay, cut in the lengths of an inch or less, or they may be bought in the form of meal. For use as poultry green feed, clover and alfalfa should be cut while slightly immature. This is one of the points that the poultry keeper will need to look to in making provision for a supply of winter green feed. Sprouted oats constitute an unfailing source of winter green feed when no other feed is available, but involve much labor and expense in preparing and feeding them to the flocks.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the importance of providing some green feeds at home. If there is not enough space in your own lot both to keep the flock and grow a few cabbages, an arrangement might be made with a neighbor who keeps no fowls to allow the use of a bit of ground for late planted cabbages. For use as poultry feed, it is not necessary that the cabbages reach full maturity or that the heads be as perfect as for table use. Even when a cabbage plant is composed almost wholly of the large green leaves that would have to be thrown away if used for table purposes it makes good poultry feed. The poultry branch of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, has devoted a great deal of attention to winter green feeds for poultry, and sends that a full measure of success cannot be attained with hens unless adequate provision is made in this regard. Where only a few hens are kept, the butcher and a report of which has been published in a professional paper, bulletin 627, a ration composed of corn meal and fresh buttermilk, fed again and again throughout the winter feeding season, produced in 14 days' coop feeding an average gain of a pound for every 100 pounds of live weight. Still better results were obtained with distillers' grains. In the tests the highest and cheapest gain was made by hens having an initial weight of two pounds or less.

Interests Eggs for Market. The loss in the United States from improper methods of producing and handling eggs amounts to millions of dollars a year. Probably one-third of this loss is due to the practical hatching of fertile eggs which have been allowed to become warm enough to incubate. This annual loss of good food can be prevented by separating the hens from the male birds after the hatching season is over. The male bird serves no useful purpose in the flock during autumn, winter and spring, and should be culled and confined immediately after the hatching season is over.
